MEET DAHLI SCHULBERG.

With her passion and professional training to cook quality, gourmet meals, Dahli Schulberg, Longbottom Catering Manager, enjoys the high energy required for catering.

After her husband Todd Schulberg encouraged her to follow her passion of cooking gourmet meals, Dahli Schulberg enrolled at the Portland Culinary Institute to become a professional chef. "Food has always been a part of me," Schulberg says, and it shows in her charisma and desire to create tasty menus.

With two children, son Zane and daughter Yasmin, Schulberg continuously tested her culinary work on her family until she graduated from the institute in 1998. After graduating, Schulberg worked at both the Jenkins Estate as Chocolate Specialist and at Sweet Masterpiece fine tuning her work in creating master desserts and chocolates. Her creations at the Jenkins Estate were so well received that they were even featured in Good Day Oregon, which inspired Sweet Masterpiece to contact her for employment at their new location in Northwest Portland.

Although Schulberg was first introduced to Longbottom when she worked at the Jenkins Estate, she came to know more about the Coffeehouse while at Sweet Masterpiece. Both places use Longbottom coffees and espresso. "I met with John Rian (Longbottom Coffeehouse Manager) and loved the positive energy I felt here," Schulberg says.

especially rewarding, when I see the happy faces of our customers," Schulberg says and adds, "It's my reward knowing how much work was involved in preparing for the party and knowing I made the food creations taste and look very good."

Schulberg also moonlights cooking healthy private meals for Portland Trail Blazer LaMarcus Aldridge. She especially enjoys cooking healthy meals — knowing that her food is not only tasty, but nutritious. Although she has prepared desserts as a large part of her background, Schulberg has also taught cooking classes, where "keep it simple" is very important.

When asked what she likes best about working at Longbottom, Schulberg will tell you "everything in this place is positively magnetic." We think magnetic describes Schulberg's personality and customers would describe her meals as positively magnificent.
